

Maguri

I love to revisit places. Photographically speaking, I never feel that I am in the same place. Light is different, as well as the situations; people change, and so do moods. There is always something else floating in the air.

I have been revisiting this little village for about ten years now and I haven't got bored yet. The project will go on. Hopefully until I die.